

Romantic Age Is Theme Of Sunset Play

Tickets Now On Sale For Production To Be Given
Next Week

A young girl's longing for a return of the romantic age forms the center of the plot of A. A. Milne's play, "The Romantic Age" which will be given at the chapel next Friday night by the Sunset players.

Melissande, played by Margaret Boslough, '30, lives in her dreams of the days of romance. When a man, dressed in costume for a fancy ball, stops at their country estate to get gasoline for his stalled car, she believes that her hopes for a return of the old age of romance are to be fulfilled. The role of this stranger is taken by John Walter, '29, and that of Melissande's parents by Ray Richards, '28, and Verel Knaup, '28.

Unusual developments and circumstances enacted in the play carry Melissande from her belief that she has actually found romance to the realization that one age is as romantic as another.

Cast

Other characters in the play are Melissande's cousin, Eleanor Len, '30; Bobby, Diehl Snyder, '29; Ern, William Meyer, '31; Gentleman Susan, George Jacobson, '29; Alice, Ruth Ann Linn, '29.

Rehearsals are being held daily to perfect the play for production. Miss Lucille Welty, dramatic instructor, is directing the play with Jean Jackson, '28, as her assistant.

Henry Johnson, '28, business manager, and his production staff are completing the work necessary to the production. Sets for the play, one an interior scene representing an English drawing room, and the other a woodland scene, are being prepared by the staff.

Tickets have already been placed on sale, and can be obtained from any member of the dramatics organization. Seats will be reserved at Belling's drug store.

Many Writing Types Given Consideration In Feature Class

Respectable authors of tradition have always starred in attics at the beginning of their careers, but disrespectful word-wielders of Lawrence are turning tradition topsy-turvy and congregating in a basement classroom of Main Hall. Four mothers, five cecods, and a lone male composition instructor make up Miss Olga Achtenhagen's feature writing class which meets three times a week to dissect and examine their brain children.

"Feature Writing" may be the name of the course in the catalog, but in reality all types of writing are dealt with from nature poems to an impressionistic sketch of Rainbow Gardens. Numerous poems, essays, features, short stories, and special articles will be written and sent out by each member of the class before the year is over, and numerous rejection slips bearing the regrets of magazines ranging from Harper's to Droll Stories will come back with the said poems, essays, features, and short stories. If even a few, however, attain print, the aspiring—and perspiring—writers will feel with Lincoln that the blood shed upon that Basement Gettysburg had not been shed in vain.

To Attend Convention

Dr. Louis Baker, head of the French department, plans to attend the sectional convention of the Modern Language association of America, which will be held during the Christmas vacation at Louisville, Kentucky.

Name Members Of Ariel Business Staff

The election of Donald Hyde, '28, as head of the advertising staff of the 1929 Viking Ariel has been announced by Oswald Gunderson, business manager.

Douglas Hyde, '28, Ray Menning, Irwin Wensink, Robert Gallagher, Victor Weinkauf, Henry Johnson, all '29; Ross Cannon and Howard Pope, both '30; Lyman Mareau, William Meyer and Kenneth Hall, all '31, have been elected to positions on the business staff.

With the membership of the staff organized, subscriptions to the Ariel may be given to anyone on the staff, Mr. Gunderson has announced.

Gladys Yves Brainard Displays Versatility In Recital At Chapel

Program Varied and Interesting;
Large Audience In Attendance

By Elsa Grimmer

Displaying an artistic sense of musicianship and a perfection of technique, Gladys Yves Brainard, pianist of the conservatory faculty, appeared in a recital before a large audience at Lawrence Memorial chapel last night.

In her varied and interesting program, Miss Brainard displayed her versatility and well-rounded musical ability, playing with delicacy and warmth of tone quality as well as dazzling brilliance and perfection of technique.

Good Interpretation

All the numbers were interpreted in a delightful and interesting manner, which portrayed the artist's appreciation and understanding of music. An observance of fine details of musical decoration was noticeable in her playing, shading and contrast being effectively used.

The opening selection by Chopin was artistically played, showing both the unusual technique and appreciation of the pianist. A showy number of lovely melody, it was played with the brilliance and sparkle that are characteristic of Miss Brainard. The final number, Liszt's "La Campanella", equally brilliant, was enthusiastically received.

Light Numbers

Ibert's "The Little White Donkey" and "Rush Hour in Hongkong" by Chassins, light numbers, were delightfully played so as to express their own individual moods. "March from Ruins of Athens" by Beethoven-Rubinstein, an unusual martial melody, was outstanding, being played with exactness of rhythm and effective shading. Four pieces from Bach's Partita in B Flat were played in a graceful and charming manner.

Miss Brainard, who has been a member of the conservatory faculty for the past nine years, has studied under some of the foremost teachers and artists both in America and Europe. Her training includes work in both piano and voice, as well as harmony and theory.

Appearing as soloist with the Minneapolis, Milwaukee, and New York Symphony orchestras, she has been successful on the concert stage.

Brokaw To Give Dance At Hall November 26

Brokaw hall will open its social season with a dance on Saturday, November 26 in the large recreation room on the second floor of the dormitory.

Three dances, one a dinner-dance, will be given during the year. The custom of a social program at Brokaw was begun last year.

Dr. J. B. MacHarg addressed the Men's club of the English Lutheran Church on "Picturesque New Mexico" Tuesday evening.

Instruction Cost Doubled Since 1920

Total Salary Increase For Teachers
Amounts to 115% in Seven Years

The per capita cost of instruction of Lawrence students has been doubled since 1920, according to figures issued recently from the office of the business manager of the college.

President Wriston, in a recent convocation address, discussing certain educational trends, referred to the increased cost of instruction at Lawrence college. An analysis of certain of these costs indicates that in 1919-20, 32 teachers were employed at a total salary of $63,630, or an average of $1,988. In the 1926-27, 50 members of the teaching staff were paid approximately $150,000, or $3,000 each. This represents an average increase in individual salaries of slightly over 50%, and in total salaries of over 115%.

The largest increase in salary is found among those holding the rank of full professor. In 1919-20 these teachers were paid an average salary of $2,288, and in 1926-27 an average salary of $3,544, an advance of approximately 55%.

In 1919-20, the enrollment of four year students was 628, the per capita cost of instruction, being approximately $100. In 1926-27 this per capita cost had mounted to over $200.

Thanksgiving Dance At Russell Sage

Thoughts of home! Thoughts of the turkey that mother used to roast! Thoughts of anything! All will pass into utter oblivion at the syncretized strains of Hank Johnson's Red Hot Henry Brown's. For after a sumptuous Thanksgiving dinner, the social committee of the Y.W.C.A., under the direction of Anita Koehler, is giving a matinee dance from 3 to 5:30 at Sage parlors. All college girls are invited, and all college men have the same opportunity extended to them—providing they come with fifteen cents in hand.

"Principles of Musical Education" Off Press

"Principles of Musical Education", a text on the psychology of teaching music by Professor James L. Mursell, has just come off the press. The book was published by the Macmillan company and included in the experimental education series.

Professor Mursell dedicated his work to Miss Gladys Yves Brainard, professor of piano at the conservatory. Two copies of the early edition are now available at Lawrence: one at the college library and one at the conservatory library.

Music Service At Congregational Church

A Thanksgiving musical service will be given by the choir at the Congregational church Sunday evening. The church choir and a mixed quartette, consisting of Mrs. Carl J. Waterman, soprano, Miss Helen Mueller, contralto, J. R. Walsh, bass, and Dean Carl J. Waterman, tenor, will take part in the program. Vocal solos will be given by the members of the quartette and instrumental solos by Miss Frances Moore, cellist, and E. C. Moore, flutist.

Research Work

Miss D. Waples, of the English department, will spend the weekend in Chicago, where she will do research work on the life and works of James Fenimore Cooper at the library of the University of Chicago.

Miss Bethurum Speaks At Y.W.C.A. Meeting

"Manners maketh the man," said Miss Dorothy Bethurum, of the department of English literature, quoting from an engraving over the gate of Magdalen college, Oxford, in her talk, "Manners, and the Moral Obligation to Be Charming", which was given before the Y.W.C.A. Thursday evening.

Miss Bethurum traced the development of social customs from the time of aboriginal man, and showed how a code of laws came to be made. She pointed out the inadequacy of this code because of its being only an external repression rather than an internal development.

"Everyone must make his own code of ethics," the speaker continued. "Our morality becomes a matter of manners."

"Manners demand and create intelligence, generosity, and love of beauty," Miss Bethurum concluded.

Ott Suggests Plan Of All-College Worship

A meeting of all college students every Sunday morning to discuss religious problems with which young people are met was suggested by Elmer Ott, '28, in a speech given at convocation Wednesday morning as a part of National Prayer week which is being sponsored on the Lawrence campus by Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

"How are we to prepare ourselves to solve other people's problems of life when we haven't time to solve our own?" the speaker asked. "We never have time to sit down and think of God, or for that matter, any of the really vital problems of living."

"College life is not complete; there is something missing. It is in a place like the Lake Geneva conference where one finds that vague element which one does not get here."

Evelyn Logan Gives Speech On Prayer

"Prayer" was the subject of the talk given by Evelyn Logan, '29, at convocation Tuesday morning. Miss Logan described a pageant, in which a Messenger of Christ called for volunteers to take up the cross. One found it too heavy, one wished to choose his cross, one was ashamed of it, but one finally accepted the largest cross and carried it, with the aid of prayer, the source of strength.

"Every person must have some source of strength besides his own," said the speaker, in answer to the question, "Why pray?" "We are apt to go on in our self-sufficiency, without thinking of prayer until we need it. Nothing which concerns us in our lives is too trivial to pray for," she concluded, "and it is constant prayer that counts."

Miriam Russell, '29, Speaks At Convocation

"We Would See Jesus," an article by Dr. Henry Crane, was read yesterday by Miriam Russell, '29, at the opening of the fourth student convocation in recognition of national prayer week.

Following this reading, Mildred Evans, convocation organist, played "Rosebuds" by Swinner and the "Marche Russe" by Schminke. Two vocal solos by Franklin LaFevre, '29, concluded the program. They were: "Little Grey Home in the West" by Lehr, and Dix's "The Trumpeter". As an encore he gave "Invictus" by Henley.

Selfish Devotion Is Theme of Guild Play "The Silver Cord"

Maternal Selfishness Provides Plot
For Sidney Howard's
"Silver Cord"

"The Silver Cord" by Sidney Howard which will be presented by the Theatre Guild Repertory company at the Lawrence Memorial chapel December 14, is the story of a woman whose devotion to her two sons took the not-too-rare form of a selfish insistence of keeping them to herself. Her maneuvers, under the guise of love and sweetness, to prevent the marriage of the one and break up the home of the other, is one of the keenest and most tragic dramatizations the theatre has had in a long time.

The Cord

The play proves that "The Silver Cord" is perhaps the cruellest of iron chains, the most binding of fetters, and quite terrible in its effects. The mother in "The Silver Cord" is tremendously selfish, completely self-centered, abnormally devoted to her sons, and ready to assume that her mistaken attitude is the beautiful thing known as mother-love.

Sidney Howard, author of "The Silver Cord", is a former newspaper man. He was responsible for the exposure of the narcotic situation in one of the leading periodicals in this country several years ago. He was also the author of "The Spy" series for another publication.

His first play was "Swords", in which Clare Eames was the leading woman. Other of his plays are "Lucky Sam McCarver," "They Knew What They Wanted," and "Ned McCobb's Daughter." He is at present at work on a novel called "Jacob Ely."

"The Silver Cord" has aroused great interest in New York. Treating as it does of mothers and a very metricious type of mother love, it is bound to stir up more commotion than anything Mr. Howard has yet written.

Sunday morning there will be a general session at the Lawrence Memorial chapel, followed by final discussion groups; the closing conference sessions will be held at 2:30 Sunday afternoon.

Voecks Impressed With Culture and Art In Germany

Germany — wiener-schnitzel, rye bread, and real beer. The American Legionnaires found their Utopia this fall in the land where a glass of water costs seven cents, and a stein of beer, three. Even gay Patee palls before the glory that is Germany's, in the opinion of some of our erstwhile gladiators who have returned.

But to Walter Voecks, '30, Germany is great, not only because of its liquid attainments, but by virtue of her people. For two whole weeks, he was feted by a German friend, with whom he became acquainted through international student correspondence. He found friendship, and learned of German culture, art, and knowledge. He saw the best of German life. Although "Wally's" Legion brothers had a good time, he declares he had a better time, and is authority that Germany is not all beer.

OUR PLATFORM

Loyalty To Lawrence
Better Inter-Group Relations
Non-Partisan Elections
Gradual Extension of Student Government

MONEY'S WORTH

A recent announcement from the business office shows that the per capita cost of instruction for students of Lawrence college has been doubled since 1920. With an average increase in individual salaries for members of the faculty of over fifty per cent, and an increase in total salaries of 115 per cent, to $150,000, a decided gain is noticeable.

This merely means that Lawrentians of today are getting more for their money than the students who hailed the institution as their Alma Mater back in '20. It sounds like a sales talk for Lawrence, but if so, it's a good one. It's just another item of interest for Lawrence boosters to file away for use during the Christmas holidays.

COMPULSION

National prayer week came to its official termination in chapel this morning, when Lawrence students met without compulsion for a prayer meeting. The response to this call will indicate, partially at least, the spiritual interest which may or may not pervade the student body. Small attendance at the meeting could not be taken to indicate a spiritual shortcoming on the part of the student body, nor could a large group be construed as due entirely to the influence of prayer week. Students must attend such meetings of their own free will, or not at all.

UNDEFEATED

Lawrence harriers have finished their second undefeated season in three years, winning every game on their 1927 schedule. When the sweaters and letters are awarded, men representing an almost perfect combination will receive the recompense for their services. There is a certain tinge of interest about the term "undefeated". It spells excellence.

An Illinois fraternity recently gave its pledges a list of four sororities, to which they were to confine their "dating". One smiles at the ill success that would greet such an attempt at Lawrence. The Greek group to inaugurate such a movement would cause enough excitement both within and without to result in a partial disintegration of itself. Association must be a gradual process of personal affiliation, and cannot be governed by a group.

Outline New System For Caging Team

Christoph, Briese and Kotal Are Named Assistant Basketball Coaches

A new policy governing freshman basketball at Lawrence has been adopted by the athletic department and is to go into effect this season, according to A. C. Denny, athletic director and varsity basketball coach, who has just announced the new system. Whereas the idea in the past has been to develop a freshman team, it will be the aim in the future of the athletic department to develop material for future varsity fives.

No Veteran Cagers

The approach of the 1927-28 caging season finds Lawrence facing a situation never known here before in that there is not a single letterman returning to the squad this season. The entire varsity squad of last season has either graduated or members have not returned to college, leaving Coach Denny without any veteran material. The only likely candidates are members of last year's freshman squad.

In order to insure basketball prospects in years to come against any such situation Coach Denny has evolved the following plan to govern freshman caging work. The idea this year and in future years will be to develop men from the yearling class for varsity material, and this will be done through a system of more individual instruction.

Three Coaches

In order to give this instruction, the athletic department has signed up George Christoph, Eddie Kotal, and Pete Briese, three of the best exponents of the Lawrence style of play who ever have been turned out here, to coach the freshman aspirants. Each man will handle a squad of fresh, and Coach Denny expects to spend almost half of his time working with them.

Under this system, players showing promise at various positions will be given individual instruction in the playing of that position, including all the tricks of the trade. Denny will lay out the type of work to be done and supervise it. No one will be cut from the squad, as there will be no regular freshman team, and Coach Denny, in urging all the freshmen to come out, states that he wants no less than fifty men in suits at every practice.

In addition to regular practice periods, which will be held only three times a week instead of every night, as in the past, and three squads under Christoph, Kotal, and Briese, will be divided into six teams, each team to wear different colored uniforms, and a regular league schedule will be played, one set of games being run off per week. This tournament will begin as soon as the inter-class series is over, which Denny has announced will be soon after Thanksgiving.

Played Last Night

Due to the fact that the gym was used for other purposes on the night of the regularly scheduled interfraternity volleyball games, these matches were postponed until last night, at which time three more matches were played. The first of these games, a clash between the D.L.'s and Phi Taus, was one of vital bearing on the outcome of the pennant chase, as both teams came undefeated through their first two matches, and were tied for the lead up to last night.

Also undefeated, but one half a game behind the leaders, are the Sig Eps, who met the Psi Chis last night in their second match of the season's card. In the other game the Theta Phis and Delta Sigs clashed. Following this postponed set, the schedule will revert to its regular channel with three more matches Saturday night, and next week, as carded.

Weather Forecasts

With the addition of the recording thermometer and daily weather reports from Green Bay to the present equipment the geology department is prepared to furnish daily weather forecasts. The Green Bay weather bureau, through Dr. Rufus Bagg, furnishes the college with summaries of weather statistics from different parts of the country.

Collegiate Football Season Comes To End On Saturday

Carleton-Cornell Mix Decides Midwest Title; Beloit Plays Coe

Except for a few games annually held over until Thanksgiving, and contests on the Pacific coast, the 1927 intercollegiate football season comes to an end this Saturday with the closing of conference schedules and with annual battles between many traditional rivals. Except for one or two minor games the Midwest season ends this week-end and the Big Ten also will wind up its season.

Two Midwest Games

Two games will be run off in the Midwest loop, one of which will decide the championship for the year, when the undefeated Carleton and Cornell eleven clash in the crucial game. In the other contest, Beloit, present cellar champions, will travel to Coe.

Five contests will bring the Big Ten campaign to an end, all conference members meeting league opponents, several of these games being traditional encounters. Wisconsin and Chicago renew their ancient feud, Michigan and Minnesota will battle once more for the "Little Brown Jug", Purdue and Indiana quarrel over possession of the "Oaken Bucket", Illinois meets Ohio State in a game which is fast becoming a tradition, and Iowa and Northwestern clash.

International Cruise To Be Held In 1928-29

Professor A. A. Trever, head of the history department, announces that students majoring in history who are registered for courses under him next year may arrange to take some of these courses next semester.

This change is being made to accommodate those students who would be inconvenienced by Professor Trever's absence on the 1928-29 International University Cruise.

The University Ship has already eighty registrations for next year's cruise. The company is seeking to make the cruise a serious educational project by encouraging proper student preparation for the trip. Early registrations have the privilege of membership in the Floating University Club, which offers advice as to the books to be read in advance, access to a special circulating library of travel books, the Floating University Magazine, and a series of bulletins of information on the various countries to be visited.

Professor Trever, who was to have been on the ship's history faculty this year, will serve in that capacity on the 1928-29 cruise, and will furnish further information to all those interested.

English Club Making Collection of Books

Lawrence alumni and other Lawrentians who have written books of any type are now receiving letters from the English club requesting two copies of at least one of their books for the college library and English club collection.

This project was started last year under the leadership of Mary Gregory, '28, then president of the club. Requests are being mailed to a group which has been selected from the list of literary alumni which was compiled last year. Erna Rideout, '28, is chairman of the project committee.

According to Marion Worthing, '28, president of the club, the books of fiction and poetry are to be secured first; then technical books will be added, until eventually Lawrence will possess two copies of the works of every Lawrentian author.

Among those whose books are now in the library are Abbie Miller, '64, Mrs. Mary Stansbury, '59, Eben Rexford, David Harrison Stevens, '06, and the late Samuel Plantz, former president of Lawrence.

Several Articles By Ford In Periodicals

Three poems and a feature article by James Ford, '28, have been published in recent issues of various magazines and newspapers.

"A Sea-going Milkman of Three Lakes, Wisconsin" was the title of his feature story which appeared recently in the Sunday magazine section of the Milwaukee Journal.

Ford, who handles book reviews on the Lawrentian, was awarded the Hicks prize for the best short story in '26, and in '27 one of his poems was published in the Theta Sigma Phi book of poetry. He is a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity.

By JAMES COLLIER FORD

ADAM AND EVE by John Erskine. Bobbs-Merrill Co. $2.50.

Adam had a happy life. You take a man who's set down in a place where there are more women than men and he's bound to make a good thing of it. Adam did and yet he didn't. There was Lilith and there was Eve and there was Adam. What Adam did and what Lilith and Eve did to him—that's a story.

John Erskine thought it was, too. So he wrote it up as one. Mr. Erskine has an extraordinary way of doing this, of picking people up 'way back in the bygone days and setting them down here in the twentieth century. And whether or not it's because of Mr. Erskine, one doesn't know—but somehow, those characters are human when we meet them in his story, very human. I think Mr. Erskine believes that people don't change much in the course of a million years or so—that is, that human nature doesn't. Just as you found Helen to be just like the girl you once knew down in Chicago, and Galahad, a Frotheroe, naive and yet with an irresistible line, who nearly broke your heart—so you'll find in Adam and Eve and Lilith, people that you know. Another thing, in Adam and Eve and Lilith, Mr. Erskine has shown composites, each standing for a general type. Adam is Man—just as he is, was, and always will be, a rather simple child where the women are concerned; Lilith is the ideal woman, sweet, comradely, unhampered by convention. By the same token, Eve is the eternal feminine, weak, and all too conscious of it, making capital of her weakness. She is adorable in spite of this, perhaps because of the inconsistencies of her nature. I suspect the very reason that Eve succeeded was because she was so absolutely incomprehensible, a mystery. Just as Man is attracted always by whatever he does not understand, so was poor Adam by Eve.

ADAM AND EVE is delicious. There's no question about that. Mr. Erskine, in ADAM AND EVE, Though He Knew Better, has soaked the old apple theory right on the nose. We all know better now. There's some very, very clever and subtle writing and an undertone of "tongue in the cheek", which is a ripple of laughter throughout. It's funny! It's so funny and touching and good that Mr. Erskine ought to be ashamed of himself. No college professor should get that way.

THE MOB by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. E. P. Dutton and Co. $2.50.

Have you ever seen a swarm of starved rats fighting over a piece of refuse in the street? If so, you can begin to appreciate THE MOB.

On the jacket of the book, it says that the novel is a "cross-section in the social depths." It's all of that. It's so real a cross-section that you fancy you can see the other half of the worm still squirming under the dissecting knife. That's not very pretty. No, but it's real. And that's the way with THE MOB.

It's about Isidro Maltrana, a poor, struggling hack writer of Madrid, who gains a small success and falls under the sensuous spell of young love in the tropical spring. He bathes in ecstasy and loveliness, and then, broken by the heartless waves, is cast upon the barren shore of poverty.

One flaw is evident. Ibanez has marred the story by still raising before Isidro a hope in the form of his infant son, even when all else is destroyed. One feels this is being untrue to the story. Is it due, we wonder, to the American insistence upon the happy ending?

THE MOB has power—the blind, gigantic strength of the horde in the squalid slums that it describes. Modern novels are often unpleasant, but that is as far as their realism gets. THE MOB is unpleasant, but vigor and capacity and truth stamp it as a literary Sampson, standing blind but potent above the insignificant writings below.
